PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI
TO THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

PETITION FOR WRIT OF CERTIORARI

The Petitioner, Adeline S. Guttelman, seeks a Writ of Certiorari to review the judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit which affirmed the District Court's order dismissing the Petitioner's Complaint.

OPINION BELOW

The opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit affirming the District Court's order dismissing the Petitioner's Complaint is an unreported opinion and appears in the Appendix, infra. It was entered on February 24, 1977.

JURISDICTION

The judgment of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit was entered on February 24, 1977. This Court has jurisdiction pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1254(1). This Petition for Writ of Certiorari is filed within 90 days of the judgment below. 28 U.S.C. 2101(c).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED

1. Does the nature of the Federal Union demand that Florida extend reciprocity to an out-of-state dentist, who has met standards equal to Florida's in her state of licensure?

2. Do Florida's denial of reciprocity to an out-of-state dentist, and its requirements that she take and pass Florida's examinations, which have no relationship whatsoever to her ability to practice dentistry in Florida, when she has met standards equal to those of Florida in her state of licensure, when Florida extends reciprocity to other professionals, deprive the dentist of her right to practice dentistry in violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteenth Amendment?

3. Do Florida's denial of reciprocity to an out-of-state dentist and its requirement that she take and pass its examinations, which have no relationship whatsoever to her ability to practice dentistry in Florida, when she has met standards equal to those of Florida in her state of licensure, deprive the dentist of her right to practice dentistry in violation of the due process and equal protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment?

CONSTITUTIONAL AND STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

Constitution of the United States, Amendment XIV, Section 1:

"... Nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty, or property without due process of law..."

"... Nor shall any state . . . deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws..."

Florida Statute 466.14:

"466.14 Examination; license certificates

(1) When the Board finds that the application and accompanying proof submitted by any person pursuant to the Section 466.13, Florida Statutes, is satisfactory, it shall notify the applicant to appear before it for an Examination at a time and place to be fixed by it..."

Florida statutes relating to reciprocity are included in the appendix to this petition.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

The Petitioner filed suit against the Respondents and challenged the constitutionality of Florida Statute 466.14, which requires that all applicants for dental licensure in Florida must take and pass certain required examinations even if the applicant is licensed to practice dentistry in another state. Florida does not even consider reciprocity for dentists.

The Petitioner is a dentist licensed to practice dentistry in New York.¹ She is a Florida resident, she meets all the requirements necessary to practice dentistry in Florida, and she desires to practice dentistry in Florida.

The Respondents are members of the Florida State Board of Dentistry. They are charged with the responsibility of enforcing statutes relating to dental licensure in Florida. They have the responsibility of preparing, conducting, and grading the oral, visual, written, theoretical, and clinical examinations which are required of all persons who apply to them to obtain dental licensure in Florida; they have the responsibility of accepting or rejecting these applicants. Obviously, they act under color of state law.

All persons seeking dental licensure in Florida must apply to the Respondents; this is required by Florida Statute 466.13. All applicants must take and pass the Respondents' examinations; this is required by Florida Statute ¹Since this cause involves a dismissal on the pleadings this Court must take as true the material facts in the Amended Complaint. Hospital Building Co. v. Trustees of Rex Hospital, — U.S. —, 44 U.S.L.W. 4683 (1976); Mandeville Island Farms Inc. v. American Crystal Sugar Co., 334 U.S. 219, 222 (1948).

466.14. An Applicant must take and pass these examinations even though she is licensed to practice dentistry in another state.

The Respondents' examinations cover the same areas and serve the same purpose as the examinations given in New York to an applicant for dental licensure. The standards that an applicant for dental licensure in New York must meet are at least as high as an applicant for dental licensure in Florida must meet. The practice of dentistry in New York is identical to the practice of dentistry in Florida.

The Respondents' examinations, required by Florida Statute 466.14, have no relationship to an applicant's ability to practice dentistry in Florida, when the applicant is licensed to practice dentistry in another state, whose standards for dental licensure are at least as high as Florida's standard for dental licensure. These required examinations do not further any compelling state interest.

The Respondents and Florida Statute 466.14 do not provide for a separate examination for a dentist who has obtained a dental license in another state. They do not provide for a hearing for a dentist who has obtained a dental license in another state, in order that the dentist might establish that she is qualified for dental licensure in Florida and that it is not necessary for the dentist to take the Respondents' examinations. They do not provide for an individualized determination of the fitness of a dentist who is licensed in another state. Less restrictive alternatives than the requirement that a dentist licensed to practice dentistry in another state take and pass the Respondents' examinations are available to insure that the dentist is qualified for dental licensure in Florida.

Florida extends reciprocity to osteopaths,² psychologists,³ registered nurses,⁴ licensed practical nurses,⁵ architects,⁶ certified public accountants,⁷ and veterinarians.⁸

The Petitioner sought a declaratory judgment declaring that the actions of the Respondents in denying reciprocity to her and requiring her to take and pass their examinations were unconstitutional, illegal, null and void; a declaratory judgment declaring Florida Statute 466.14 unconstitutional, illegal, null and void as applied to the Petitioner; the convention of a three-judge federal district court panel; an injunction requiring the Respondents to admit the Petitioner to the practice of dentistry in the State of Florida; an injunction restraining the Respondents from enforcing Florida Statute 466.14 as it applies to the Petitioner; and such other further relief as the Court might deem meet and proper.

The district court requested the convening of a three-judge court, and one was convened.

Acting without a hearing, the three-judge district court panel dissolved itself and the single district court dismissed the Amended Complaint.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

I

THE DECISION OF THE COURT BELOW
CONFLICTS WITH THE PRINCIPLES
ENUNCIATED IN THIS COURT'S DUE PROCESS, EQUAL PROTECTION, AND REC-IPROCITY DECISIONS.

DUE PROCESS

Schware v. Board of Bar Examiners, 353 U.S. 232 (1957), held that:

A state cannot exclude a person from the practice of law or from any other occupation in a manner or for reasons that contravene the Due Process or Equal Protection clauses of the Fourteenth Amendment . . . " (353 U.S. at 238-239).

Statutes affecting constitutional rights must be drawn with "precision". N.A.A.C.P. v. Button, 371 U.S. 415, 438 (1963). The Statutes must be "tailored" to serve their legitimate objectives. Shapiro v. Thompson, 394 U.S. 618, 631 (1969). " . . . If there are other reasonable ways to achieve these goals with a lessor burden on constitutionally protected activities, a state cannot choose the way of greater interference." Dunn v. Blumstein, 405 U.S. 330, 343 (1972). The state must employ "alternative administrative means which do not so broadly infringe on basic constitutional liberty, in support of their legitimate goals." Cleveland Board of Education v. LaFleur, 414 U.S. 634, 647 (1974).

The Respondents could employ numerous less restrictive alternatives to insure that the Petitioner is qualified to practice dentistry in Florida. For example, they could conduct an informal hearing at which the Petitioner could present her credentials and a resume of her practice and experience. They could grant reciprocity, as Florida does to osteopaths, psychologists, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, architects, certified public accountants, and veterinarians, upon a showing that the professional standards that the Petitioner met when she obtained her dental license in New York are at least as high as Florida's standards.

Due Process requires that the Petitioner be given an opportunity to establish that a "less restrictive alternative" than the requirement that she take and pass the Respondents' examinations could be utilized to establish her fitness to practice dentistry in Florida. Goldsmith v. United States Board of Tax Appeals, 270 U.S. 117, 123 (1926); Grannis v. Ordeon, 234 U.S. 385, 394 (1914); Fuentes v. Shevin, 407 U.S. 67, 80 (1972); Goldberg v. Kelly, 397 U.S. 254 (1970); Snidach v. Family Finance Corp., 395 U.S. 337 (1969).

EQUAL PROTECTION

Florida extends reciprocity to a number of professionals, especially professionals in the healing arts. Reciprocity is extended to osteopaths, psychologists, registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, and veterinarians. It is denied to dentists. The practice of these professions does not change with geography. The classification of these professions in one group and dentists in another is arbitrary and unreasonable. It is simply inconceivable that there is any basis, rational or otherwise, for this arbitrary classification. Reed v. Reed, 404 U.S. 71, 76 (1971); Stanton v. Stanton, 421 U.S. 7 (1975). These other professionals are afforded an opportunity to establish that they are competent to practice their profession in Florida, on a reciprocal basis. Florida's denial of such an opportunity to dentists is inescapably contrary to the Equal Protection Clause. Stanley v. Illinois, 405 U.S. 642, 658 (1972).

The circumstance that all persons who desire to practice dentistry in Florida must pass the Respondents' examinations does not end the Equal Protection inquiry. Equal application of a law does not mean that it satisfies Equal Protection:

"The Equal Protection clause requires more of a state law than non-discriminatory application within the class it establishes . . ." (Rinaldi v. Yeager, 384 U.S. 305, 308 (1966))

Thus, "Judicial Inquiry under the Equal Protection clause . . . did not end with a showing of equal application among the members of the class defined by the legislation . . . " McLaughlin v. Florida, 379 U.S. 184, 191 (1964). Therefore, the " . . . manifest inadequacy of any approach requiring only equal application to the class defined in the statute . . . " Id. at 190, n. 8, is apparent.

The Equal Protection Clause applies to regulation of the professions. Schwartz v. State Board of Bar Examiners, supra; Bolton v. Texas Board of Barber Examiners, 350 F.Supp. 494 (ND Tex. 1972), aff'd, 409 U.S. 807 (1972). Bolton held unconstitutional a state statute which permitted cosmetologists to perform their work on females only and barbers to perform their work on males only.

The Petitioner is in the identical position as dentists who have taken and passed the Respondents' examinations. The licensure requirements in New York are identical to Florida's. However, although the Petitioner and these other dentists are similarly situated, they are not treated identically. The Petitioner must once again prove her qualifications to obtain a dental license in Florida. There is simply no reason why the Petitioner should be required to reestablish her qualifications, especially when the establishment process entails the most cumbersome and onerous procedure possible. Filling a cavity in New York is no different from filling a cavity in Florida. Florida's purported attempt to protect the public through the examinations requirement runs afoul of the Equal Protection Clause. Craig v. Boren, — U.S. —, 45 U.S.L.W. 4057, 4060 (1976).

The responsibility of the several states to extend reciprocal benefits to the citizens of other states is well established. Great Atlantic & Pac. Tea Co., Inc. v. Cottrell, — U.S. —, 96 S.Ct. 923 (1976); Travis v. Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., 252 U.S. 60 (1920); Austin v. New Hampshire, 420 U.S. 656 (1975). In Cottrell this Court invalidated a Mississippi Health Regulation which provided that milk and milk products from another state could be sold in Mississippi only if the other state accepted milk and milk products produced and processed in Mississippi on a reciprocal basis. This Court held that even if this regulation enabled Mississippi to insure that the reciprocating state's health standards were as high as Mississippi's, there were other, less restrictive alternatives available which were less burdensome on commerce, to reach this goal. — U.S. at — 96 S.Ct. at 930. Similarly, the Respondents can reach their goal by other, less restrictive means.

II

THE DECISION OF THE COURT BELOW IS IN CONFLICT WITH THE DECISION OF THE UNITED STATES COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA IN BERGER v. BOARD OF PSYCHOLOGIST EXAMINERS, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975).

In Berger v. Board of Psychologist Examiners, 521 F.2d 1056 (D.C. Cir. 1975), the Court held that a statutory irrebuttable presumption of professional incompetence, in the absence of a graduate degree in psychology, or a certain number of hours of graduate study in psychology, deprived a practicing psychologist of his right to practice psychology, without due process of law.

The psychologist was qualified, as is the Petitioner, to practice his profession, although he had never been certified or licensed to practice psychology in any other jurisdiction. The licensing authorities ignored the psychologist's qualifications and denied his application for licensure because of his failure to meet the threshold requirement.

The Court noted that "... in order to protect his 'liberty' and 'property' interests in his profession, appellant seeks an opportunity to rebut the statutory presumption of his incompetence." 521 F.2d at 1062.

The Court first quoted with approval from Vlandis:

"The state's interest in administrative ease and certainty cannot, in and of itself, save the conclusive presumption from invalidity under the due process clause where there are other reasonable and practicable means of establishing the pertinent facts on which the state's objective is premised." (521 F.2d at 1062)

The Court then held that:

"The principle of Vlandis is applicable to the facts of the instant case. A part, and presumably a significant part, of the D.C. licensing process is the administration pursuant to D.C. Code §2-481 of an examination devised by the licensing board to applicants holding a doctoral degree. No reason has been suggested why the board could not fashion a similar examination and substitute passage of that test for the current requirement of passing an examination plus holding a degree . . . on remand, following a declaration by this Court that the statute's irrebuttable presumption does not accord with principles clearly set forth in the case law, the Board could proceed to determine whether Berger's extensive clinical experience, coupled with his limited academic training and apprenticeship, have afforded him a professional competency equivalent to that of a doctor of psychology who has only two years of acceptable post-graduate experience." (521 F.2d at 1062-1063)

Thus:

"... Whether an applicant previously engaged in the practice of psychology misses the statutory standard by an inch or a country mile, he must be afforded a fair opportunity to demonstrate his professional skill according to reasonable standards before he is denied the right to continue his practice." (521 F.2d at 1063)

The Court required the Board to fashion an examination to comport with the psychologist's individual circumstance:

"... we remand the case to . . . the licensing board to administer to Appellant Berger an examination designed to determine whether his professional skill is commensurate with that of new psychologists being currently licensed under the act. In so doing, we do not act as a legislature to add this requirement to the statute, but rather strike down as unconstitutional that part of the statute which requires an applicant to have an academic credential as well as a certain number of years experience in order to qualify to take a license examination. Only by this action can we remedy the constitutional defect of the statute as it is applied to Berger and to other psychologists without the requisite academic credentials but possibly possessed of the necessary skills." (521 F.2d at 1064).

Berger and this case are irreconcilable. This Court should grant certiorari to resolve the conflict.

III

THE DECISION BELOW PRESENTS AN IMPORTANT QUESTION OF FEDERAL CONSTITUTIONAL LAW WHICH HAS NOT BEEN, BUT SHOULD BE, RESOLVED BY THIS COURT.

This Court has never before decided whether a dentist who has been admitted to practice dentistry in one state has the Federal constitutional right to the opportunity to establish that the standards that she met in her state of licensure are equal to the standards of the state in which she seeks admission, thus relieving her of the requirement that she take and pass the second state's dental examinations.

This Court, not the court below, should make that decision.

CONCLUSION

For the above stated reasons, the Petition for Writ of Certiorari should be granted.

Respectfully submitted,
